

When government properly fulfills its God-given responsibility of punishing those who do wrong and commending those who do right, it protects the inherent, God-given rights of citizens.