

According to advocates of CRT, the primary groups in society are victims and oppressors. If you're black, you're a member of the "victim" group, and if you're white, you're a member of the "oppressor" group and are a racist. It doesn't matter if you're white and disadvantaged or black and wealthy. Nor does it matter if you have no animosity toward members of different races. You may even have friends of other races. You're still defined by your group. The color of your skin identifies the group of which you are a member.