

Many people today have a form of vertigo in their lives. They base all kinds of judgments on feelings. Absolute truth—moral and ethical standards of right and wrong—can be likened to a plane's instruments. For the Christian, truth is found in the Bible—God's Word—but nature (natural law) and conscience certainly are more reliable sources of truth than one's feelings. Basing one's decisions in life on absolute truth ensures a safe flight and a safe landing—but we must refuse to follow feelings and must swim upstream against today's cultural tide.
