

[T]he more public provisions were made for the poor, the less they provided for themselves, and of course became poorer...[taking] away from before their eyes the greatest of all inducements to industry, frugality, and sobriety, by giving them a dependence of somewhat else than a careful accumulation during youth and health for support in age and sickness.

— Benjamin Franklin —